

Chapter 1

Persuading from the line on the table
The drips fall precisely

This vibration from the impact of a closed fist running through wood grain will make determination.

Chapter 2

"Shall we go to drink coffee next time?" is an undesirable sentence for me.

It indicates that those people regard coffee as most favorite drinks for lively conversation.

There are many variety of drinks. Why don't we normally drink milk while chatting?

Or rather, it unlikely happens that one would ask me "Shall we go to drink pepsi cola?" for a date. I would have a clear understanding of their drinking preference.

"Shall we go to a café?", that is what I hear anyway.
The origin of Café is coffee in French, and according to the dictionary, the meaning shifted to what we nowadays consider as a shop, which serves drink and cake.

In conclusion, I cannot avoid my coffee's curse.

Chapter 3

He hypothesizes that anyone has a potential to became popular.

One weak point is there was no pinpointing where nor the age you will be popular.

Chapter 4

A radio host was talking about his business trip to the Netherlands for 4 days 0 night including the flights.
Because of the tough schedule, he had to see everything.

" I can see through a beautiful row of houses along the street an exploitation from many another countries.
At all cost please show me everything,
And then please show me everything.

This is a very beautiful pot. Where was it from originally?
Please show me everything,
Porcelain ,Van Gogh, Rembrandt, Vermeer, please show them to me."

Chapter 5

It was already 8 times in the last 6 month for her to stay at her Uncle's home. At the first visit, her uncle and aunt ate breakfast together.

They were just reading on the sofa near the dining table, on which there was one cup of instant coffee, sunny side up egg and two small toasts on a round plate for her breakfast.
Her 9th stay was quite a long time after the last visit.

As soon as she came to the kitchen for breakfast as always, her aunt sprang up from the sofa, came to the kitchen and offered her one cup of coffee.

While she was frying a sunny side up egg, she got caught in a cross fire of not-important-but-unusual-questions from her aunt as if her aunt would hide a butterfly in her stomach.

Suddenly, her uncle got off from the sofa, entered the kitchen and stood in front of a new glossy red half-round machine.
He picked up one small dark green metallic container from a glass box, put it in the machine, and gave his niece a cup of cappuccino.

In the evening of the same day she was looking for a kettle in the kitchen to drink a herbal tea, which was a birthday present from a friend. The tea used to be next to a banana-hanger but what she found the place was occupied with a brand new glossy red half-round machine.

According to the aunt, the kettle was thrown away since her uncle and aunt don't drink instant coffee anymore.

She boiled 244 ml water by the microwave.

Chapter 6

A man of middle age got on board of a ship. A master of chess player were talking to the unknown tree on board .

"I have never forgot all of them who played with me.

During a game, crowds of hands move a piece instead of me.
One was 2 guys I played with last week, one is my uncle, one is a great teacher 100 years ago.

I memorize all the hands to remember whom they belong to.
Sometimes an unfamiliar pale rugged hand plays a piece.
All other hands will move and disappear into the fog and my hand must play it.

Looking at my hand, it is always shaking. I tingle with excitement."

There was a silence for a while
"Is it you?"

An Ice in the glass melts away about 2mm.
Cat eyes crack open at dawn.

The ship was carrying seeds.
